

ABSTRACT

An access point (210) equipped with a storage medium (220) and configured to buffer video streams (315, 320) can efficiently manage the amount of bandwidth consumed by wireless video clients (140) accessing the same video at the same access point, thereby reducing the impact on service to coexistent wireless users (130) of that access point.